Ruth Owens of Regents College Is Entertained

Sunday afternoon the Women of the Moose held an open meeting at the Moose Hall on Broadway. Eight new members were initiated in honor of Ruth Owens, junior graduate associate regent, of the college of Regents.

Mrs. Owens was introduced by Alice Gaddis, guide of the local chapter. Mrs. Owens gave a short talk on the work being done by the Women of the Moose. She also congratulated the local chapter on its ritual work and the good it has done in six months.

A large number from the Poughkeepsie chapter were present, including Clara Killmer, senior regent of the Poughkeepsie chapter and many men of the Local Order of Moose. Many other out of town chapters were also represented.

Social chapter night program was also held at this meeting. Evelyn Jancsek as chairman of this committee made a speech and introduced her two helpers, Minnie Haber and Eleanor Shurtler.

Late Bulletin

Paris, March 28 (AP)—The Germans declared tonight that American Third Army tanks were prowling in the heart of the Reich 213 miles from Berlin as their armies north of the Ruhr broke into wild retreat before the massed might of Allied armor and infantry.

The scope of enemy disintegration increased as four powerful armies of Gen. Eisenhower broke clear through collapsed defenses at points 145 miles deep in Germany.

The Fourth Armored Division—the mystery spearhead of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army—was definitely on the loose well beyond Aachenburg, 22 miles southeast of falling Frankfurt on the Main. It presumably was into or through the Spessart hills, 100 odd miles from Czechoslovakia.

DuMond to Declare Milk Price Differential

Syracuse, N. Y., March 28 (AP)—Emphasizing that he was acting only because of a court mandate, C. Chester DuMond, state commissioner of agriculture, said today he would declare a milk price differential to be paid to members of the Guernsey Breeders Association in two marketing areas.

Addressing an annual farmers field day gathering, DuMond said the amount of the differential to be paid out of the equalization pool to association members in the Rochester and Niagara frontier areas, had not yet been determined.

The equalization pool is a balance held by the commissioner out of payments due producers to provide an equalized or uniform price to all producers.

Referring to a recent appellate division decision at Albany that the commissioner must pay the differential out of the pool, DuMond asserted that the Guernsey Breeders Association represented "only a part of the farmers producing milk from Guernsey cows and many of the farmers who produce from other breeds providing milk equally rich in butterfat."

The appellate ruling was made in an action brought by the association against former Commissioner Holton V. Noyes who opposed the Guernsey breeders' request for a special price differential.

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 28 (AP)—Responding to Washington reports that action to curb speculation was not imminent, the stock market today rolled up many gains of fractions to a point or more.

The advance, led by rails, steels, air transports and motors was a continuation of Tuesday's moderate rally after marked weakness over the last week or so. Revival of buying encouraged many Wall Streeters to believe the market had about completed its adjustment to the wind up of hostilities in Europe, whenever this occurs.

Volume was under that of some recent days although the tape was lively at times.

Substantially ahead near the fourth hour were Chrysler, General Motors, Hudson, Studebaker, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union "A," International Telephone, Westinghouse, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines, Atlantic Coast Line, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Bonds and commodities also improved.

In the curb higher prices were paid for Fanteel, Raytheon and Baldwin Locomotive warrants.

Quotations by Morgan Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 60 Beaver street, New York city branch office, 48 Main street, R. B. Osterhout, manager.

Manpower Action Is Before Senate For Final Test

some other agency designated by him—could.

Fix employment ceilings (the number of men and women workers permitted) in designated plants or localities.

Prohibit or regulate the hiring, raising, solicitation or recruitment of new workers by employers.

Prohibit or regulate acceptance of new jobs by workers.

Freeze workers in their present or new jobs by forbidding them to quit.

510,000 Fines for Conviction

Willful violators would be subject, upon conviction, to a federal fine of up to $100,000 and a jail term up to one year. In addition, wages paid to workers hired illegally could not be listed as a business expense for income tax purposes.

The bill directs Byrnes to encourage local cooperative efforts of management, labor and agriculture and to use existing hiring channels when they are available.

Byrnes also would be ordered to survey manpower use and take steps to eliminate any labor hoarding or wastage he might find, whether in government agencies or in private industry.

No provision is made for forcing workers to move from one area to another to take new jobs, but the legislation permits them to be offered transportation costs if they volunteer to move.

Persons ordered to change jobs would hold the same reemployment rights to their original jobs as the draft act gives returning servicemen.

Workers or employers dissatisfied with any order issued under the act would have the right to appeal to "administrative tribunals" to be set up by Byrnes.

The legislation would expire June 30, 1946, or sooner if the President or Congress should declare the war ended before then.

Railroad Policeman Gives Warning to Children

With the approach of the Easter vacation and spring weather, Sgt. E. W. Schoonmaker of the New York Central Police Department warns children and young people against trespassing on railroad property.

He advises against walking along the tracks, playing around the railroad tracks and yards or standing near the tracks to watch the trains.

Believing that discipline should begin at home Sergeant Schoonmaker urges parents to emphasize the dangers in playing near the railroad tracks. With the heavy traffic on the railroad even the practice of watching troop trains has become hazardous. He points out that often teen-age girls and boys interested in watching the soldiers do not heed the dangers from approaching trains on other tracks. This custom is particularly noticeable in Kingston where many of the trains stop for servicing.

Sergeant Schoonmaker asks parents to cooperate in preventing accidents by warning children and young people to stay away from railroad property.

MERIT RATING ADOPTED

The adoption by the Legislature of merit rating for unemployment insurance will be appreciated by tens of thousands of employers throughout New York State. The favorable effect of this action may be expected to be felt more and more with the passing of years. New York at last has given business some evidence of hospitality in the tangible form of a reduction in tax inequality.

Governor Dewey, who recommends action in his opening message in January, may be expected to sign the bill which was adopted during the closing hours, thus bringing to New York State employers a provision which employers in many other states have enjoyed for years.

While the merit rating measure which was adopted may not satisfy everyone, it marks the first reduction which has been authorized in this tax in the ten years since unemployment insurance was adopted. The amount of reduction which will apply to tax payments beginning in October was estimated at $80,000,000 by Irving M. Ives, chairman of the Committee on Industrial and Labor Conditions, and also by Senator Benjamin F. Feinberg.

It is to be hoped that this will mark the beginning of a new policy of action to encourage those who meet the payroll and pay such a large part of the taxes in New York State. If such a policy is followed New York State's future will look brighter than it has for several years.

JAPS, CHINKS AND YANKS

Japan is a very ancient nation, but her modern phase began less than 100 years ago, when Commander Perry with his American fleet broke through her isolation and introduced her to the modern world. That seems to have been a mistake as far as America was concerned, but with the spread of travel and knowledge it would probably have come soon, anyway.

For a generation or two the Japs were humble—or seemed so—while they absorbed from America the elements of modern learning, with special attention to our science and industry. The two nations got along well enough during that schooling period. The Japs were eager and courteous, and our own people cheerfully taught them the elements of western learning. They were mainly interested, however, not in our humane modern culture, but in our practical science and industry, in which they were apt pupils.

First they turned their new learning, and the material power which came with it, to an attack on Russia, which stood in the way of their expansion.

We have had a tough job lately in beating down those false friends and restoring peace to the Pacific, but the end is in sight. And with a better appreciation of our real friends, the Chinese, we shall manage gradually to put that part of the world in order, and keep it so.

A DISEASE ABATES

Nazism seems to be a sort of mental rabies. First Hitler was bitten, and then he proceeded to bite everybody around him. Sometimes it didn't "take," but mostly it did, and apparently the disease had to run its course through the thought and behavior of the German people.

Lately there are some indications of recovery. Here and there appears a German who seems almost normal, and improved behavior tends to spread in widening circles. If Hitler himself was really wounded and nearly killed in the Nazi "putsch" a few weeks ago, and is now unable to direct the warfare and its ideology as he did so long, that helps to explain the situation.

UNUSUAL DICTATOR

President Vargas of Brazil is evidently a different kind of dictator. He has been ruling as an absolute monarch since 1930. Lately he has announced that there will be a nationwide election for the presidency. Parliament, state governors and state legislatures. He himself will not be a candidate, though it is possible that he might consent to run if elected.

As a dictator Vargas might have been ex-

WITH A MIGHTY HAND

Once every year, I sit down to a feast to discuss slavery. I have done that since I can remember. My ancestors have done this for thousands of years, since Moses led them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Tonight, on March 28 of this year of war and enslavement, millions of men and women will read out loud to their children the story of slavery—an old story, often repeated in human history—and we shall also talk of liberation and freedom.

It was at just such a feast that Christ and His friends sat at the Last Supper and read exactly the same words, in the same language that I shall tonight. They read of the cruel conqueror of a people who put them to building cities and monuments by slave labor. The evil, the crime, the sin of slavery inevitably is abhorrent to anyone who year after year reads these lines:

"Because we were slaves unto Pharaoh in Egypt, and the Lord our God brought us forth from thence, with a mighty hand, and an outstretched arm."

For thousands of years, men inscribed on their minds and their hearts, the story of an enslavement never to be forgotten, to be repeated generation after generation. Who can go through this annual experience and condone slavery anywhere? Who can recognize that any person, any ruler, any country has the right for whatever reason to enslave another person?

It is said to me that I am unrealistic, that Hitler enslaved Poles and Frenchmen and Belgians and Jews; therefore, it is right to enslave Germans. I reply that that is an immoral doctrine. Hitler is a vile and indecent man. Shall we imitate him? Are we giving our sons to war that they may imitate him? Nothing can be more non-sensical if it is realistic. I am told that if Soviet Russia needs workers to rebuild the cities that Hitler has damaged or even destroyed, we ought to be silent about it. But how can Jews sit at the Passover table, how can Christians think of Jesus at the Last Supper and be tolerant toward slavery?

Reports come from Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria that intellectuals are being seized and shipped to Siberia, that the men and women who fought in the various underground movements for human liberty and for democratic ideals are disappearing since the Communists have taken over their countries. When we Americans speak of free elections in those countries, do we also demand that all those who are in Siberia not because they collaborated with Germans but because they opposed the enslavement of their people by anybody shall vote in those elections? Do we ask why authentic democrats are disappearing after the Nazi has been defeated?

If there is any idealism left in the American people, it must express itself now, today, even in the midst of war, in opposition to slavery—any form of slavery, wherever slavery exists, wherever slavery rears its miseries.

I have been thumbing through the pages of the magnificent translation of Saint Thomas Aquinas by Professor Anton C. Pegis which Bennett Cerf has sent me, and thinking upon the subject of slavery. I looked at his lectures on free choice, his proof that man has free choice, and I could not help thinking of the 80,000,000 Europeans who are being deprived of all freedoms of choice, of will, of expression. And even more, I cannot help thinking of the proposals to employ 10,000,000, or even 20,000,000 human beings at slave labor to rehabilitate Soviet Russia.

These proposals appear and disappear and about them there is a hush-hush. But how can we be silent and be true to ourselves? Why should we be silent? It is our obligation to ideals older than this war to speak out when slavery reappears. No man can avoid the consequences of slavery—no one can refuse to face its shame. No American has the right to forget the awful sacrifices suffered here because of slavery. Slavery must be made so repugnant and costly that no man, no ruler, no country will ever dare to advocate it or to employ slave labor.

ARE EXTRA VITAMINS NEEDED?

A druggist friend of mine asked me why I was not taking vitamin B1 tablets as several physicians of his acquaintance were taking them regularly. I told him my appetite was good and I slept well. So that I didn't need vitamins of any kind aside from what were in my food. I did, however, try to use a balanced diet daily.

With so much need for vitamins for various deficiencies in individuals the question arises as to whether it would be wise for everybody to take a small quantity, at least, of the various vitamins daily to ward off various ailments caused by lack of vitamins. Will vitamins be of benefit to those in good or normal health?

This question has been answered by an investigation as to the effect of extra vitamins on normal persons by Drs. Julian M. Ruffin and David Cayer, Durham, N. C. Their report appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"It has been argued that such vague symptoms as weakness, nervousness, tiredness and insomnia can result from lack of vitamins and therefore when such symptoms appear, treatment by vitamins should be started. Further, surveys by the National Research Council as a guide have shown that the average American (and Canadian) diet is not adequate to maintain necessary nutrition."

Drs. Ruffin and Cayer used five groups, A, B, C, D, E, medical students and laboratory technicians. Group A were given vitamin tablets and liver extract tablets, group B were given vitamin tablets and yeast extra tablets, group C were given vitamin tablets and placebo tablets (tablets containing no vitamins or other extracts but which "looked like" vitamin tablets), group D were given vitamin tablets alone, group E were given placebo only. They all continued their various activities and ate the same diet. Each member of the various groups was given a work sheet to be kept daily and was instructed to record his impression as to the effect of the "medicine" he was taking on the appetite, energy and "zip," general health, "lack" of indigestion, nausea and vomiting, number of stools daily, abdominal pain, and weight.

After a thirty day trial of the above treatment Drs. Ruffin and Cayer state that giving vitamins to a group of apparently normal persons, consuming the usual American diet had no beneficial effect that could be noticed.

Messed Up Mr. In-Between

ERNE PYLE'S COLUMN

In the Western Pacific—(delayed)—We were up an hour and a half before daylight, for our planes had to be in the air at the first hint of dawn.

The first patrol was always launched by catapult, because in the wind-swept semi-darkness, it was too dangerous for them to make the run down the rolling deck.

After seeing the flights launched the first few days, it became stuff, and I would have stayed in bed and ignored it, but that was impossible. The catapult's huge launching machinery was directly above my cabin, and every time it shot a plane off it was just as though the Washington Monument had fallen on the ship. Rip Van Winkle himself couldn't have slept through it. So I just got up.

The fighter pilots were given their last briefing. In the "ready room" the squadron commander and intelligence officer showed them on maps and by drawings on the blackboard, just where they would strike.

The squadron commander asked how many of the pilots had no wrist watches. Six held up their hands. The funny part was that the ship had no extra watches, so I don't know why he asked the question in the first place.

Then he told what our approximate total of planes over Japan would be, and how many it was probable the Japs would put up against us. And then he said:

"So you see, each one of us will only have to take care of three Jap planes!"

The pilots all laughed and looked at each other sheepishly. (Days later, when the final scores were in, we found our force had destroyed Japs at nine-to-one.)

And at the end of his briefing, the squadron commander gave strict orders for the pilots not to shoot at Japs coming down in parachutes.

"They're supposed to do it to us," he said, "but that isn't the thing for us to do."

The bomber pilots and their enlisted gunners and radomen were briefed the same way. After the intelligence officer had finished, the squadron commander said:

"We're going to dive low on the target before releasing our bombs. Since we're risking our necks anyhow, there's no point in going at all unless we can do some damage, so go down low."

All through the various strikes on Japan, our task force kept enough planes back to fly a constant blanket of protection in the sky above us.

I remember the funny sign chalked on the blackboard of the "ready room" the first day, urging our patrol pilots to extra vigilance for Jap planes that might sneak out from the mainland to attack us. The sign said:

"Keep alert—remember your poor scared pals on the ship!"

We didn't know whether our first planes over the mainland would surprise the Japs or not. It didn't seem possible, yet there were no indications that they knew.

For two days on our approach we had been knocking off Jap reconnaissance planes and picket boats. We hoped we had got these scattered planes and boats before they had time to radio back home the news of our presence. One of our destroyers had even sat all day on top of a Jap submarine to keep him from coming to the top and sending a warning.

But still we didn't know for sure, so there was tenseness that first morning. We knew almost exactly what time our first planes would be over the Tokyo area.

We went to the radio room to listen. The usual Japanese programs were on the air. We watched the clock. Suddenly—at just the right time—the Jap stations went off the air.

There was silence for a few minutes. And then the most dreadful duck-like screaming and jabbering you ever heard. The announcer was so excited you had to laugh.

We knew our boys were there. After that, for us on the ship, was just a matter of waiting and hoping. And as the blackboard sign said, of being poor scared pals.

"At Century's Turn"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Back in the horse and buggy era there were a number of fine livery stables in Kingston, where a horse and buggy could be hired by the young man who wanted to take the girl friend for a buggy ride.

Among the livery stables downtown in 1900 in Kingston were those of Grove Webster on Mill street; Patrick J. Conroy, Julius Metzger, and Peter Hamilton on Ann street; Edward N. Parish on lower Broadway; Mrs. M. E. Murphy on Mill street.

In the central section of the city were the stables of George Lund and William G. Parker on Railroad avenue.

Uptown there were Henry Kelder on Fair street; Charles W. Belyea on Albany avenue; George Roosa on Fair street; Gilead A. Smith on Wall street; Smith Brothers on Clinton avenue, and Ernest Steuding on upper Broadway.

Harness making was also an important industry in this city at the turn of the century. Among the harness shops I remember were those of Samuel Dill on Wall street; George Main on Hasbrouck avenue; Martin Mayer, Jr., on Hasbrouck avenue; Stephen Snider on Washington avenue; George Snyder on Hasbrouck avenue; Theodore Spore on Wall street; and Peter B. Warner on Albee street.

Horses also had to have shoes in addition to harness and among the horseshoers in 1900 in the city were George Adams on North street; William J. Anderson on Foxhall avenue; William Deegan on Broadway; James Herdman on Washington avenue; Abram S. Humphreys on Hurley avenue; John S. Kearney & Sons on Wall street; L. V. K. Miner on St. James street; Patrick O'Reilly on lower Broadway; Henry Partlan on East Union street; Thomas Partlan on Hasbrouck avenue; and Jacob Plough on Wall street.

With the gradual increase in the number of automobiles in the city the old livery stables began to disappear from the scene. Some of them were turned into public garages.

Turning from horses to amateur entertainment the Essex Club of the Rondout Presbyterian Church on February 23, 1912, presented the annual minstrel show in the church.

Although Public Is Ready to Write Off European War, Military Cannot Say When Victory Will Come

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 28—The inherent tendency of the American people to anticipate events before they have actually happened will produce perhaps our greatest problem in the immediate future.

Despite everything that has been said or written about the necessity of building supply lines and especially for communication systems behind our huge armies in Germany, the public in the last 24 hours has been ready to write off the European war as all but ended.

Collapse and panic can come at any moment, of course, but nobody in authority in the Allied governments can afford to operate on the basis of such an expectation and certainly workers in war plants are not justified in relaxing their efforts because of the sudden rise of our hopes for an early victory.

It would be worth a good deal to the Nazi high command if at the moment of our brilliant success in crossing the Rhine, some way could be found to throw the Allies into a frenzy of premature celebration and sudden slackening of war production.

Whether the Nazis will or will not fight to the bitter end is something of secondary importance at this time, because the fact remains our armies have defeated the Germans west of the Rhine and are moving rapidly into open country toward the east. The bulk of German territory has yet to be conquered. General Eisenhower's pointed comments on the need for railroad bridges are, however, the most important news in all the reports from the front.

When he says that we need railroad bridges and that they cannot be built overnight, he is saying in effect that soon the Allied armies must stop their advance and wait for their supplies to catch up with them. Meanwhile, the Nazis will have a chance to consolidate their remaining armies for further operations. The war could go on through the summer if the Allies are forced to wait several weeks to get the rail bridges built. Small pontoon bridges are useful but hardly adequate for a major offensive east of the Rhine that is to keep on going till a juncture can be made in the north and south with the Russian armies.

The big uncertain factor of all factors, however, is in the realm of national psychology. What will be the effect on the German people of the news that the Allied armies are well across the Rhine and that inevitably there must be a junction with the Russian armies?

German soldiers who have been indoctrinated in Nazism for years will fight to the bitter end because they have been trained to do so by the Hitler movement. But no single German army corps is perhaps composed 100 per cent of Nazis. There are merged with them other troops of middle age who will recall how Germany collapsed before. They will tend to extricate themselves as quickly as possible from the clutches of the Nazis. Many will lose their lives doing so. But this kind of internal difficulty must inevitably produce conditions of incipient chaos.

The iron hand of the Nazi commanders may keep the German defense adamant for several weeks inside new lines. General Eisenhower is going on that assumption. There may be "peace" feelers but the Nazis must know these will be of no avail. Only an offer of unconditional surrender from Hitler or Goering or Himmler would receive serious consideration, and then only perhaps in order to arrange for a uniform "cease fire" order if that is all feasible. Since the three above mentioned individuals are doomed to die anyway, it seems improbable that any such surrender offer may come from them. It may, therefore, be taken for granted that an "imposed" surrender such as General Eisenhower refers to, as differentiated from a "negotiated" surrender, is to be looked for.

The American people, of course, assume that it's all over in Europe but the shouting. They will make a grave mistake in assuming that resistance will end overnight when it does end. The surrender will come as a result of a series of military successes and after a crumbling of one army after the other. It may be piecemeal and cumulative rather than uniform. But that the end of organized resistance will come this summer and that unorganized or guerrilla resistance will occur thereafter would seem to be as far as the military developments thus far permit prophesy to be made. High military men are optimistic just as they were last September, but it is safer to assume that the European war will not be over till the white flag has actually been raised throughout all of Germany as a result of direct conquest by our military forces.

Washington in Wartime

By MAX HALL

(Substituting for Jack Stinnett who is ill)

(Second of three columns on the coming seventh war loan drive.)

Washington—Why will you be asked to buy more bonds in the seventh war loan than you have bought in any previous drive? You have a right to an answer.

It's your money. Officials of the Treasury's War Finance Division talk about the seventh war loan in these terms: "The cost of war is not declining. In January and February, war expenditures were actually higher than in the same two months a year ago."

The income of the people remains at a dizzy level. Goods available for civilians are getting scarcer. That puts more money in people's pockets. The more of this sort of money there is, the harder it is to control prices and keep inflation within bounds.

That doesn't mean we are to buy bonds simply as an anti-inflation measure. The big aim is to pay for the war.

The cost of the Pacific war will be tremendous, and Treasury officials say that when Germany folds up war expenditures won't drop as much as many people think.

If Germany should collapse before or during the bond drive (May 14-June 30), the Treasury can't and won't change its plans. War costs will still be high. Besides, the inflation danger will still be acute.

The quotas won't be lowered. The drive will continue. In fact, the sales effort will be more strenuous than ever to counteract any possible let-down in public participation.

There's a postwar loan to the seventh war loan, too. From the standpoint of the nation's economy, war bonds are a stock of economic blood plasma. From the standpoint of John Citizen, with that neat stack of war bonds in the top dresser drawer, he has savings that he can turn instantly into cash when he needs it, or hold until maturity and get $4 back for every $3 he invested.

Some government officials think there will be very little cashing of bonds immediately after the war, in comparison with the total amount. They feel that the very existence of the bonds—representing insurance against an emergency—will stimulate business by making people less reluctant to spend their incomes or invest it in new enterprises.

Since the quotas are bigger—seven billion dollars for individuals with four billions of it in series E bonds—the seventh war loan drive will last longer than ever before. The main drive will run seven weeks from May 14 to June 30.

In addition there will be a three-month overall drive during which wage and salary earners will be asked to step up their payroll deductions. This runs from April 7 through July 7.

It was hand to hand combat between four Russian "slave laborers" and three German civilian police. The Soviet forces came out on top with substantial military booty—three bicycles on which they disappeared over the horizon in great haste.
The engagement began when one of the four Russians, looking for an American "displaced persons center," saw three German policemen at an intersection and recognized one of them as a former overseer in a factory where the Russians had been compelled to work for three years.
It was a golden opportunity—one the Russian had dreamed of a chance to give his old straw boss a hiff on his Teutonic nose.

Report Given on Produce Auction

Mid-Hudson G.F.L. at Milton Did $430,825 Business in Year
The Mid-Hudson G.F.L. Produce Auction at Milton comprising about 600 growers did a $430,825 business during the past fiscal year. E. H. Allen, local manager, reported at the annual patrons' meeting Monday afternoon in the Highland Grange Hall. E. N. Clarke, Jr., of Milton was chairman of the business meeting which followed dinner at noon. Patrons of the Mid-Hudson G.F.L. farm supply store received $3,580 in cash as patronage refunds on their local operations. Approximately 3,000 tons of feed were marketed by patrons of the cooperative.
In addition to the regular produce auction sales at Milton, this cooperative performs a tomato packing service and barrels fruits such as raspberries, currants and grapes for freezing.
L. E. Bly of Ithaca, marketing supervisor for eastern New York, reviewed the development of marketing by G.F.L.
"Originally started as a cooperative to purchase feed, fertilizer and other supplies needed by farmers for the production of crops, it was soon recognized that to do a complete job for farmers, a two-way service must be rendered," explained Bly. "Accordingly, the marketing of patrons' produce has been developed during the past 13 years to the point where this past year more than $15,000,000 worth of products were handled for approximately 25,000 patrons in New York State and Northern Pennsylvania by Co-operative G.F.L. Farm Products—the marketing division of G.F.L."

The service is symbolic of the passion of Jesus on the last night before the crucifixion.

The elders of the church represent the disciples of Jesus and as they read their part of the service a candle representing each disciple is extinguished. Finally, the candle symbolizing the Gospel itself is taken from the church and the sanctuary is left in complete darkness until Easter. The elders taking part will be J. W. Murray, C. Augustus Raschke, Stanley Matthews, John Garon, Frederick Hoffman and Hubert Hoderath.

Red Cross Program Explained to Auxiliary

Mrs. Charles Tappan, executive secretary of the Ulster County Red Cross, and who was president of the Kingston Hospital Auxiliary for 12 years between 1917 and 1928, spoke to the Auxiliary Tuesday afternoon at the regular meeting. Mrs. Tappan has been connected with the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross for 27 years and has a 25 year service bar. Yesterday she presented the program sponsored by the Red Cross. She was introduced by Mrs. Reynolds B. Carr in the absence of Mrs. Frederic Holcomb, program chairman.

The Red Cross was incorporated in 1900 and now has 4,000 chapters throughout the country. Funds to carry on the programs are raised through voluntary contributions and during peace-time by membership," she explained.

Some of the programs outlined by Mrs. Tappan were the Home Service, benefiting service men and women at home and abroad; production groups, serviced by organized groups. The local chapter in the past year has made 12,085 garments; 2,570 knitted articles and filled many kits. Volunteer Nurses' Aides are trained as nurses' assistants. Hospital and recreation program provides friendly service and recreation for the convalescent patient. Canteen corps are trained to handle mass feeding projects in time of need. Motor corps provides efficient transportation at all times. Red Cross workers help in clinics and with blood donor service, the latter being the largest in the history of medical science. First aid courses train people to give immediate temporary care in case of accident or sudden illness, before a physician can be procured. Home nursing, nutrition and disaster relief are some of the other projects in which the Red Cross aids in communications with prisoners of War. 132 of these messages have been sent in the past year. Recruiting nurses for the Army and Navy is one of the major activities relative to serving the armed forces.

The Junior Red Cross in this area is enabling the young people to join in the nation's defense. It was first introduced by a representative from the national organization about two years ago, when he spoke before a group at the Kingston High School. Clarence Dumm and Mrs. Stuart Wiley took the leadership. Now there are 100 high schools and grammar schools in the county participating. They have contributed 6,000 articles this past year, for men and women in the service. In closing Mrs. Tappan said "The Red Cross constantly battles against suffering, wherever it may be."

Announcement was made of Open House and Inspection of the Hospital to be held in observance of the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, May 12. This date has been set as a national hospital day and the people of the community and surrounding territory are invited to inspect the hospital that day.

Fifteen members were present at the business meeting and Mrs. Frederic Chidsey, president, presided. Two new members were announced, Mrs. F. A. Gilder-sleeve and Mrs. Frank Tease.

Mrs. S. B. Schwarzwalder reported on the weekly visits to the hospital made by Louise Wilkinson, student nurse; Mrs. Leonard Flicker, nurse in the drive; Mrs. Reynolds Carr on public speaking of the excellent support from The Kingston Daily Freeman and The Kingston Daily Leader during the drive. Mrs. Chidsey also expressed her appreciation for the workers on the drive and to the public for their generosity.

The second floor diet kitchen has been completed. This project recently undertaken by the auxiliary was inspected following the meeting. The room has been redecorated and has new cabinet work, refrigerator, sink and gas range and tile floor.

Resolutions will be made on the death of two members, Mrs. Irving Scott and Miss Agnes Lee. Attractive Easter favors for the children's trays on Easter Sunday have been donated by the Junior Red Cross of Stone Ridge School under the direction of Miss Alberta Davis. Mrs. Eugene Pemberton and Mrs. Parker K. Brinnier recently donated vases to be used in the hospital.

A social hour followed the meeting with Mrs. A. W. Mollott, Mrs. John Herlihy and Mrs. Robert Groves serving as hostesses. Mrs. Parker Brinnier presiding. The table decorations were in keeping with the spirit of the meeting, on a Red Cross banner was depicted a small hospital scene, a patient in a small bed being cared for by two mannequin dolls dressed as nurses. The white napkins had a small Red Cross on, as did the attractive cakes. The money formerly used for flowers, was given to the Red Cross. The hostesses decorated the president's table with a bouquet of daffodils and pussy-willows in keeping with the Easter season.

Jack Magee Resigns Position With Scouts; to Buy Property

return to Buffalo, where formerly he was connected with Boy Scout work and where he again will be engaged in scouting, taking up some highly specialized work in the Buffalo Council, which has some 6,000 Scouts.

It will be just two years since Mr. Magee came to Kingston as Scout Executive of the Ulster-Greene Council. He can take justifiable pride in what has been accomplished here during that time.

Among some of the things accomplished are:

The seven districts of the council have been organized and monthly meetings are being held. Operating committees of the council have been organized and are functioning.

A definite advancement program has been set up and now there are both troop boards of review and district boards of review.

Training courses have been operated in all of the districts. Thirteen new scout troops were organized in 1944 and by May 15 this year 11 more new troops will be organized, in addition to three new cub packs.

Finances of the council are in excellent shape and the yearly budgets have risen from $7,200 to $19,700, the latter having been raised during the finance campaign last fall.

The headquarters office in Kingston has been moved to larger quarters and the staff increased by the addition of an assistant scout executive and an assistant clerk.

Camporees were held in all seven districts last year, whereas formerly but one council camporee was held.

The council now has a trained commissioner staff of over 30 men.

There has been a large increase in membership, with around 1,200 scouts enrolled at present and prospects that the number may reach 1,400 by the end of this year.

The New Camp.

The selection of the camp site at East Jewett follows an extended search for a suitable site, during which some two dozen properties were surveyed.

Operated for some 20 years as a camp, the property embraces 150 acres of land, on the headwaters of the Scholastic creek. There is a baseball diamond and swimming pool, and some buildings, but not enough to accommodate all the scouts who doubtless will want to make use of the camp.

The council committee is working on plans for necessary alterations and additions to the buildings and if the camp cannot be used as a permanent camp this summer it presumably will be available for short-term camping. G. Wallace Codwise, president of the council, presided at the dinner meeting Tuesday night, which was attended by 33 members of the executive board.

A successor to Mr. Magee as scout executive has not yet been selected but a committee will interview a number of prospects for the position.

Five Men Held by F.B.I. For Selective Service Fraud

New York, March 28 (AP)—Five men with lucrative executive positions in non-essential business are charged by the F.B.I. with having fraudulently obtained deferred draft classifications.

E. E. Conroy, agent in charge of the New York F.B.I., announced the arrest of the men yesterday. He said the personnel manager of a war plant where they had been employed also was arrested on a charge of having conspired with each of the executives to violate the draft law.

These arrested were: Irving Weintraub, 36, personnel manager of the Universal Camera Corp., where the five men were employed in the fall and winter of 1943-44; Murray Haberman, 33, manager of a doll manufacturing plant; Leslie Murray Wain, 31, buyer for a jobbing company; David Harold Schickel, 37, advertising manager of a resident buyer concern; Meyer Weiss, 35, an attorney and secretary of a toy manufacturing concern, and Irvin Jerome Tolk, 36, of 47 Earle Place, New Rochelle, N. Y., sales manager of the Toy Manufacturing concern which employed Weiss.

Conroy said all the executives except Haberman had an income of between $10,000 and $20,000 annually and that Haberman's earnings approximated $45,000 a year. The F.B.I. agent added that the men worked for the camera company for a short time for $20 to $30 a week and obtained draft deferments and kept them, although the company's war commitments for optical equipment terminated in March, 1944.

Industrial Relations Project Draws Inquiries

Ithaca, N. Y., March 28 (AP)—

The New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations to be established at Cornell University "may set the guideposts on a new road to employer-worker harmony," Dr. Edmund Ezra Day, university president, said today.

"The number and varied sources of the inquiries indicate a nationwide interest in the first school of its kind in the country," said Day in a statement. "It is evident that this pioneer effort of New York state to make education the foundation of understanding between labor and industry will be watched closely."

Day reported that requests for information concerning objectives of the new school had been received from 17 states, the province of Ontario and Puerto Rico. These requests, he added, were in addition to inquiries received from prospective students in many states and youths in military service overseas.

Wards 2 and 3

Saturday of this week waste paper collections will be resumed in Wards 2 and 3. On subsequent Saturdays collections will be made in the other wards. Boy Scouts will collect the waste paper, which continues to be one of the nation's critical shortages.
